

Vote YES on CRC Proposal 67: Phase Out Greyhound Racing

- Sponsored by CRC Commissioners Tom Lee, Don Gaetz, and Brecht Heuchan, Proposal 67 will phase out greyhound racing by December 31, 2019.
- Commercial greyhound racing is a dying industry and is illegal in 40 states. Twelve of the eighteen American operational dog tracks are in Florida. Since 1990, the amount wagered on greyhound racing in the Sunshine State has declined by 74% and tax revenue from dog racing has dropped by 98%.
- Approximately 8,000 greyhounds endure lives of confinement at Florida tracks, kept in warehouse-style kennels in rows of stacked metal cages that are barely large enough for them to stand up or turn around. The dogs are given shredded paper or carpet remnants for bedding, and are normally confined for 20 to 23 hours per day.
- Since the state began tracking greyhound deaths in 2013, 438 dogs have died at Florida tracks. On average, a greyhound dies at a Florida racetrack every three days. At least eight serious cases of greyhound neglect, some involving starving dogs and withholding medical care, have been documented in the Florida greyhound racing industry over the past decade.
- Florida is one of only two states that does not publicly report greyhound injuries. A single county, Seminole, began tracking greyhound injuries in May of 2017. Since then 40 greyhound injuries have been reported, including 32 greyhounds that suffered broken bones and two dogs that died.
- Over the past decade there have been 419 greyhound drug positives at Florida tracks, including 68 greyhound cocaine positives, and positive results for novocaine, lidocaine, industrial solvent DMSO, and opiates oxycodone and oxymorphone. Female greyhounds are routinely given an anabolic steroid to prevent a loss of race days, a cruel practice that harms animal welfare and raises integrity concerns.
- To reduce costs, greyhounds are fed raw “4-D” meat from downed animals that has been deemed unfit for human consumption and contains denatured charcoal. In January 2017 seventeen dogs fell ill and a dog died at Sanford Orlando Kennel Club due to the ingestion of 4-D meat.
- A state dog racing mandate forces racetracks to offer live racing as a “loss leader” for more viable forms of betting. This comes at a significant cost to taxpayers and the tracks themselves. In 2016 Florida dog tracks lost a combined $34.8 million on racing. According to a study commissioned by the legislature, the state is losing between $1 million and $3.3 million annually because regulatory costs exceed revenues.
- The greyhound industry has proven itself incapable of change. In recent years it has fought common sense proposals to require greyhound injury reporting, outlaw the use of anabolic steroids, and eliminate the state dog racing mandate.
- Proposal 67 is supported by key opinion leaders, including the Sun-Sentinel, Naples Daily News, Ft. Myers News Press, the Humane Society of the United States, Greyhound Adoptions of Florida, Greyhound Rescue and Adoptions of Tampa Bay, GREY2K USA, and the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.
